Officers Nominated for the House of Representatives.

- The vaucus of the Democratic members of the House of Representatives on Saturday afternoon nominated M. C. KERR, of Indiana, for Speaker on the third ballot. The vete on that bailot stood : KERR, 90; RAN- which a 450-pound bale is reduced to a Dall, 63; Cox, 7. The canvass has been a warm one. The leading candidates, Messrs. KERR and RANDALL, were highly qualified for the duties of Speaker, and their claims upon the Democratic party for fidelity and sense were the strongest. Both of them manfully sustained the Constitution and the equal rights of the States in opposing most vigorously the reconstruction measures of the Radicals. Mr. Ran-DALL was eminently distinguished for the leading part he took last winter in the filibustering that was engineered to defeat by delay the objectionable civil-rights bill of the Radicals. This would probably have decided the contest in his favor but for his complicity with the salary-grab affair, which damaged him in the struggle.

Mr. Kern, the successful candidate, is a gentleman of decided ability. In his devotion to constitutional principles he is in no peril of being complicated with the South to his injury at the North. He was a War Democrat. But he has shown a manhood and boldness in standing up against terrorism and persecution in the exercise of governmental authority over the South that entitle him to our very high respect as a just statesman and a true defender of the Consti-

Mr. KERR was born near Titusville, Pa., March 15, 1827; graduated as a law-student at the University of Kentucky in 1851; commenced the practice of the law in 1852 at New Albany, Ind.; and after filling several public positions in his State-among them that of representative in the Legislature—he was elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress in 1865. He has served in every subsequent Congress save the Forty-third-the one which immediately preceded that in which he now takes his seat. He is a gentleman of commanners, calm and firm disposition, and remarkable self-possession in the midst of ex-

Gambling Everywhere.

This is the age of gambling. It has perplaces and pursuits, unless, indeed. we except the churches; and even there we have now and then some connivance at a raffle or some form of chance used for pieus and benevolent objects. It has spread iook upon it with anxiety as fearfully indicative of demoralization. Everything that is sold has become a means of gambling. There are rings in all departments of trade. Stocks, gold, flour, bacon, corn, wheat, and everything which affards subsistence for, we may say, man and beast, are used by the modern gamblers. Men afflicted with a mania for acquiring wealth ment was taken up and agreed to. by sudden and dishonest means rush to tricks and games of chance-to the base artifice of "cornering" the necessaries of lifethat they may get the control of human subsistence and put a tax upon it to enrich

Such a state of things is terrific. There can be but a low condition of conscientiousness in the commercial and business classes where the occupations are subjected to such expedients as these. It is but a refined sort of cannibalism, where the people are preying upon one another-not, indeed, eating bodies, but taking from one another by vile strategies the means of life.

"You take my life When you do take the means whereby I live."

Gambling, when so common in the business of life, could not, of course, be kept out of polities, which in this country has become so blended with the spirit for des- Davis, Jackson, Gordon, and Jones. perate playing. Long dallying with the political struggles of the times, gambling has taken fresh hold, and with entire shamelessness appears at the capital of the nation. and "pools" are raised upon the important election of a Speaker of the House of Representatives. The papers say that John Morrissey, the king of gamblers, has taken position in Washington and gone heavily into the "business of betting on who will be Speaker." So much excitement has been occasioned by this betting, and it has become,a.matter of such pecuniary interest as to who is to be elected, that it requires no stretch of imagination to see that money may be used freely to settle the question, and somebody mas have his way to the Speaker's chair payed with dollars.

The spectagle is painful to all reflecting men who hope for civil government under orderly systems in which the voice of the people shall control. But as cornering and gambling are placing the peop le at the mercy of gamblers in their very food and wages it may seem a secondary affair that their voices are at a discount. In the midst of the hurly-brarly of the day these matters may excite little attention. The ruling passion may have then hold upon the spirits of so large a progertion of the people that the warning voice nuy be no more beeded than the voice that cric's in the wilderness; but as sure as we live the fearful signs of demoralization of which we speak will be by the future historia v secounted as a part of the causes that will b'swe led to great political changes if not disaste to, and Wise, Stovall, Young, and Pierson, The Visit of the Iron-Men. Major Downer, of the company of gentlemen who recently took a superficial survey of the James River iron region, continues his sketches in the Huntington Adocrtiser. The teader will remember that we have quoted from these sketches some extracts Howard, Clarke of Campbell, Popham, Arof gentiemen to Richmond. He thus speaks of one of our most prominent works:

"After a short visit to Messrs. Tanner & Co.'s Metropolitan Machine Works we went to the famous Tredegar Works, where all the operations of puddling, rolling, and manufacturing iron are carried on "the company of gentiemen to Richmond, He thus speaks and its Tributaries: Messrs, Lovell, Gilman, and Coale.

There works, and there the cars are built. There were the cars are built. built. There were a large number of cars being built in the car-works for a South Carolina road. In addition to these, there are large plate-rolls, where boiler-plate is made; a foundry, where they were filling a heavy order for water-pipes for a southern rick, Witcher, McEiroy, Paul, and Hamilton. city; machine for the manufacture of horse-and mule-shoes, &c., &c., &c. "In the machine shops they have lately built a machine for compressing cotton, by thickness of eight laches, receding to twelve by the slackening of the band. It was a gigantic piece of machinery, and cost $25,000. it was purchased by a New York cottonhouse. We then visited the city gas-works, which are using now Kanawha coal entirely, and making a first-rate article of gas."

Major Downer says that he found the gentlemen of the Press in Richmond earnestly interested in the object sought to be achieved by himself and his colleagues in their visit to the James River valley-viz. :

"The awakening of an interest in the connection of Buchanan with Clifton Forge either by canal or railroad. This connection is of special interest to the iron-men of Ohio, because it will open up to them the vast deposits of magnetic and specular ores of Virginia, which they may thus procure at a much lower price than they are compelled to pay for Lake Superior ores, which are the only other ores of like quality accessible. A new source of wealth will thus be opened up to them. They may commence at once the manufacture of Bessemer or Siemen's steel and all their concomitant products. "Another important matter is that the ores of Virginia are nearly equal in quality to those of Missouri, of which large quantities are now used in the furnaces along the Obio river to mix with the poorer eres of the neighborhood, but which, being brought by the river, must be kept largely in stock, interrupted by ice or low water several months at a time. One furnace in Ironton now has five thousand tons of Missouri ore on hand, which cost them at least ten dollars per ton, making an investment of fifty thouand dollars. The necessary connections being made, the ores of Virginia would be always accessible, so that in addition to the economy in price a very large difference in invested capital would be in their favor."

A Vigorous Protest.

[From the Petersburg Appeal of Saturday.] Instead of binding over the parties to the Richmond election scandal to keep the peace we think the city authorities would do better to bind them over to fight it out among themselves, and so have an end of it one way or another. We hold life to be a most precious gift of the Creator, but even so orthodix a Bluelight authority as Stonewall Jackson thought that degradation was worse than death; and asked to know what was life without honor? We hate to hear of all human bloodshed, but red blood is better even when spilt than black blood when vented at the expense of putlic morals and public Swann, Popham, Ronald, Starke, Williams propriety.
